Some Parents Think...

I'd rather my kids drink at home than in a car.

I did it when I was their age and I turned out just fine.

I let them drink now and again at home so they won't go crazy when they go off to college.

BUT...

Man charged for underage party

A New Philadelphia man was charged with one count of furnishing alcohol to minors after New Philadelphia police received an anonymous call about a party at his house Friday. Jacques T. Bailey, 32, of 307 Beaver Ave. NE, will have an initial appearance in New Philadelphia Municipal Court on Thursday. Fourteen youths were taken to the police station and released to their parents but were not charged.

Teen parties: Adults must also show responsibility

PARENTS WHO HOST PARTIES for their underage children who are drinking alcohol are being held responsible for the damage they are doing the right thing. They think that they are being a "cool" parent to their teens. Or they think that they are providing a "safe place" for their teens to drink. They could not be more wrong - both legally and socially.

The law clearly prohibits parents from providing beer, wine, or liquor to their children. The law also clearly prohibits parents from allowing underage juveniles, other than their own children, to consume beer, wine, or liquor in their homes. Parents who violate this law are subject to criminal penalties of up to 180 days in jail and a $1,000 fine for each separate violation. Teenagers caught consuming alcohol also face criminal penalties in the county jail or the juvenile detention center.

These laws have been vigorously enforced in the past, and my office will continue to vigorously enforce this law.

A Unified Message

- Parents play a major role in their children's choices about alcohol, tobacco and other drugs
- Most teenagers appreciate when their parents set boundaries and fairly enforce expectations
- Adults hosting underage drinking parties:
 - Send a mixed message about the acceptability of drinking
 - Show students that they don't have to obey laws
 - Contribute to the misperception that all youth drink

Know the Risks

- Taking away the car keys does not solve all of the problems related to underage drinking
- 6 people under 21 die every day from non-driving, alcohol related accidents, such as drowning, falls and suicide

Know the Risks

- Unwanted sex and delinquent behaviors increase with underage drinking
- Underage alcohol use has been reported to be involved in 36% of homicides, 12% of male suicides and 8% of female suicides
- Young people seem to be aware that using alcohol influences their decisions about sexual behavior: 29% of 15-to-17 year olds and 37% of 18-to-24 year olds said that alcohol or drugs influenced their decision to do something sexual

If your child drinks alcohol, it is likely that alcohol will affect the development of his brain.

- During adolescence, brain organization and function enters a unique period of flux. It takes about 25 years for the human brain to build the necessary foundation on which all future development will depend.

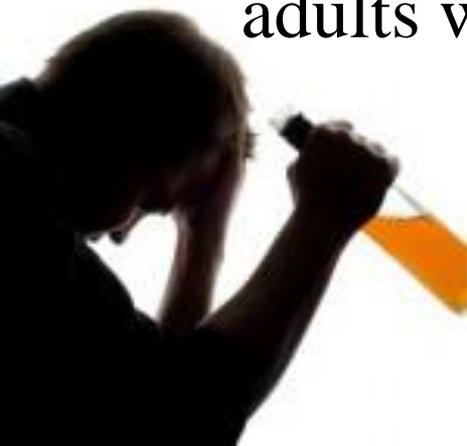

Know the Risks

If your teenager drinks alcohol, he will be at greater risk of having alcohol problems as an adult.

- Of adults who began drinking before age 15, approximately 40% report signs of alcohol dependence, which is four times higher than for adults who did not drink alcohol until 21.

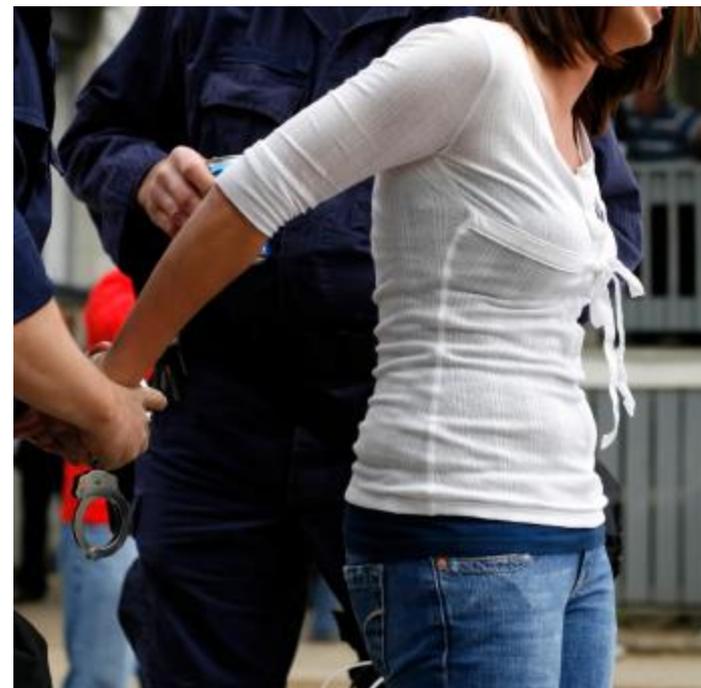

What Parents Should Know

- As a parent you cannot give alcohol to your teen's friends under the age of 21, under any circumstance, even in your own home with their parent's permission
- You cannot allow a person under 21, other than your own child, to remain in your home or on your property while consuming or possessing alcohol

If You Break the Law

- You can face a maximum sentence of six months in jail and a $1,000 fine
- Others can sue you if you give alcohol to anyone under 21 and they, in turn, hurt someone, hurt themselves or damage property
- Officers can take any alcohol, money or personal property used in conjunction with the offense

NJ Facts

(for those that like references)

- It is illegal in NJ to serve alcohol to anyone who is under the legal drinking age of 21 (NJSA 2C:33-17a)
- It is illegal to allow your home or property be a place for anyone under the legal drinking age of 21 to consume alcohol (NJSA 2C:33-17b)
- Anyone serving or providing alcohol available to a person under 21 is subject to a $1,000 fine and up to 180 days in jail per person served. Parents can be held civilly liable even if they are not present during the time of the party (NJSA 2C:33-17)
- If serving an underage person alcohol results in injury, the adult may be charged with Endangering the Welfare of Children, and may be subject to a fine of up to $15,000 and up to 5 years in state prison (NJSA 2C:24-4)
- New Jersey Law imposes civil liability on social hosts who serve alcohol to anyone under the legal drinking age of 21 who is subsequently involved in an incident causing injury or death
- A social host may be sued for up to two years after an incident that occurs resulting in injury or death. As the result of a lawsuit, your house, car, and bank accounts may be seized and future wages may be garnished

Know the Risks

- It is illegal to host or allow teen drinking parties in your home
- It is unhealthy for anyone under 21 to consume alcohol
- It is unsafe and illegal for anyone to drink and drive
- Parents can be prosecuted under New Jersey's Social Host Law and local property ordinances

Things Parents Can Do:

- Host safe, alcohol free activities and events
- Refuse to supply alcohol to anyone under 21
- Be at home when your teen has a party
- Make sure that alcohol is not brought into your home or property by your teen's friends
- Talk to other parents about not providing alcohol at other events your child will be attending
- Create alcohol-free opportunities and activities in your home so teens feel welcome
- Report underage drinking to local law enforcement
